Ms. Carrie L. Wallace
County Administrator
Upshur County Commission
91 West Main Street
Buckhannon, West Virginia 26201

Dear Carrie:

As a part of our regularly scheduled on-site inspections required by the National Park Service (NPS) on Land and Water Conservation Fund-assisted (LWCF) projects, the County's facilities at the Upshur County Park were recently reinspected.

These facilities were in good condition according to NPS standards and reflect well on the maintenance staff's efforts to provide quality outdoor recreation. Some ADA items to correct include the installation of some ADA-compliant playground equipment in the park's playground and the repositioning of a bathhouse urinal to not exceed 17" AFF (above finished floor). Additionally, the park needs the reposting of a LWCF acknowledgement sign. Please have a representative contact our office for further signage or ADA design assistance to address these matters.

As you know, the LWCF Act states that the project areas defined by an LWCF agreement cannot be converted to alternate uses, other than for outdoor recreation purposes, without replacing the facilities developed with the grant at local expense. Any such conversion must not be undertaken without prior notice to our office and approval of the National Park Service. To prevent a conversion-in-fact from occurring, the Park Service requires notice to be given of any park facility changes prior to their being constructed. Any future, planned changes including outsales, conversions, abandonments, or additions to this LWCF-assisted park needs to be reported to our office before such changes are acted on.

We are pleased to report the maintenance of these worthwhile public facilities to the National Park Service. If you have any questions about this information or need additional clarification, please contact me or James Bush of our office at 304.957.2046 or by email to john.r.mcgarritty@wv.gov or james.e.bush@wv.gov.

Sincerely,

John McGarrity

Summary of Proposed Project (2 or 3 sentences):

The Curry Coders Club will provide an introduction to coding by providing the necessary infrastructure (broadband internet, tablets, notebooks, laptops) and access to a self-paced coding instruction (Prenda) system allowing participants to learn how to build apps, games, and software. While the club will target children, interested adults will be welcomed and encouraged to participate.
NARRATIVE: James W. Curry Public Library “Curry Coders Club”

NEED:

As computers become increasingly ubiquitous and learning to code is emerging as a critical skill, youth in rural communities are being left behind. Society is evolving rapidly as the impacts of computer technology are felt in every aspect of human life. This change means a very different landscape faced by the rising generation. Those who can work with a computer will be significantly more successful than those who cannot. The signs are already here: over 300,000 open computer programming jobs, making up 71% of STEM-related jobs today. Coding is not for a niche technology industry. Two-thirds of computer programming jobs are outside of the tech sector, and this trend is growing as computer science concepts are applied to many disciplines. Beyond the workplace, computer science has been recognized as "a new basic skill necessary for economic opportunity and social mobility." Efforts in recent years have expanded coding education, but limitations in both people and technology in rural areas have meant very little progress, resulting in a widening gap in access between urban/suburban and rural populations. As one commentator put it, "the most direct road to the modern American Dream doesn't pass through rural America," For example, a 2016 Google study found that computer science is a lower priority in rural schools.

Public libraries serving small and rural communities throughout the U.S. can provide access and exposure to help young people achieve the gains from computer programming. As stated in the American Library Association’s Office For Information Technology Report, "Ready to Code: Connecting Youth to CS Opportunities Through Libraries," "communities [where libraries provide coding] will see young people who are ready to take on their futures, who have robust career options, and who guarantee the economic and social vitality of the cities, towns, and reservations in which they live." By offering consistent informal coding programs, small and rural libraries can play a critical "community anchor" role, creating a safe environment for youth to learn valuable skills and experience a sense of belonging through interactions with peers and adult facilitators.

But small and rural libraries face challenges. Many library staff are apprehensive about leading a coding program because they do not have the expertise they think is required, struggle to find time to prepare lessons, and don't know how to build community partnerships in order to connect with experts that may help them build successful coding activities. As a result, many small and rural libraries across the nation never try to run a coding program.

Here at the James W. Curry Public Library, we would like to make our community the exception to the data. With the appropriate funds we can acquire the infrastructure and partnerships needed to run a life-changing code club in our library.

The James W. Curry Public Library would like to provide coding education programming for youth in rural southern Upshur County, West Virginia. Computer programming education is categorically among the highest impact opportunities for library programming. Research shows that not only will programs like the one proposed here provide skills for future job placement in a high paying field, but it teaches children how to think rationally, a much needed skill set for today's youth.

This grant proposal is requesting funds for the infrastructure needed to run a code club. Laptop computers, charging stations, tablets, and educational software are all required in order to offer a code club. Currently the library has just 2 public access computers unable to perform at the level needed for a coding club.

Additionally, James W. Curry Public Library will apply funds towards a third party coding program provider, Prenda. Prenda has a service package designed to enable libraries to run successful code clubs. They provide one on one training with the librarian, software that teaches the children how to code, and ongoing support to help ensure the program is a success. The annual subscription for their services is very reasonable, and this proposal is requesting funds to cover one year of services.

As an endowed library, we receive no state or local government funding and budget cuts over the past 2 years have decimated our funding for technology. This grant funding will help us in our attempts to bridge the digital divide.

PURPOSE:

To lessen the digital divide endemic to rural communities, stimulate interest in STEM related careers, and to remain true to our founder, James W. Curry’s purpose in creating this library: to better oneself mentally, physically, spiritually, and economically through knowledge with a view to returning to the community help others do the same.

TARGET AUDIENCE:

The target audience is children and teens between 8-18 years of age. A typical code club will see 10-20 kids each week, for an annual attendance of 500-1000. Many of these are repeat visitors: Prenda’s data suggest that each club will reach 100-200 unique patrons over the course of the year, with many of these progressing well beyond an introduction and eventually building competency with computer programming languages like scratch, javascript, and html. At the James W. Curry Public Library we are including tablets in our request to be able to expand our target audience to include children not yet able to read and use the Prenda software. Visual based, free software and touch screen technology will allow us to accommodate families with siblings and make the most of their visit to our facility through inclusion. Several adult patrons have also expressed interest in learning to code which could lead to additional programming.

PLANNED ACTIVITIES:

The James W. Curry Public Library will host a weekly code club - an informal facilitated learning session where children and teens work together to teach themselves computer programming and build video games, websites arid apps. The project leverages Prenda's learning software tool, training and support program that make it easy for any library to run a code club.

The code club will see it’s inauguration as a part of our vigorous Summer Reading Program when we typically reach the most children and with a view to building a following that will sustain it year round. With the infrastructure and the Prenda software in place children who due to logistical issues cannot attend club meetings can still gain the advantage of coding knowledge through independent activities. At the end of the project, we will consider renewing the Prenda software if appropriate and continue providing opportunities to practice coding collectively and/or individually.

QUALIFICATIONS:
Library staff will facilitate the code clubs after receiving training from Prenda. The code club will be supported with the librarian, a paraprofessional, and volunteers. Because the software includes all activities, curriculum and administrative reporting, the staff commitment is limited to the two hours of code club meetings. Prenda will support the facilitators by phone, email and web conference as needed.

EVALUATION:

A significant advantage to the Prenda software system is the data analytics available to evaluate usage and progress.

SHARING:

The code clubs will be offered free of charge. While all patrons in this age range are invited, the outreach and marketing efforts will specifically target individuals from traditionally underrepresented groups. Outreach strategies include: Library event calendars and signage; School outreach; Community partnerships (Girl Scouts, Boys/Girls Club, etc.); local press coverage (online, print, television).

Since we are starting at “ground zero,” if we can successfully execute this program, presenting our journey at the West Virginia Library Association Spring Fling would be a realistic possibility.

BUDGET:

We began a year ago to bring this program to fruition after finally succeeding in upgrading our internet connectivity and accessibility. In seeking funding, we initially sought $5000.00 to purchase tablets, chromebooks, laptops, a charging depot, software subscription, and allow for start-up costs (see attached, prices and availability have changed however comparable products should be available once funding is acquired). We were recipients of a $2000.00 grant from ACP/Dominion which has been earmarked for this project. We are seeking an additional $3000.00 for the purchase of equipment and software. Any other expenses would fall in the institutional overhead category. Ideally, I would like to put a plate on each device indicating that it was provided by the Loleta D. Fyan Grant.
